

Old Enough to Save the Planet: Meet the activists behind the book

Meet some of the real-life children taking action against climate change from this book. Hear them speak to their passion and their work... in their own words!

In this book, meet 12 real-life children...

Felix From Germany

Passionate reforestation activist and creator of Plant for the Planet.

Himangi From India

Campaigner for reducing the effects of traffic pollution outside her school.

Amy and Ella From the UK

Two sisters committed to eradicating single-use plastic through their charity Kids Against Plastic.

Adeline From Indonesia

Reintroduced native species of plants and animals after severe floods affected her home.

Hunter From South Africa

Campaigner for the protection of rhinos against the threat of poachers.

Brooklyn From the USA

Young writer who visits schools around her country to talk about the effects of litter.

Vincent From France

Creator of a community garden that reduces food waste.

Eunita From Kenya

Founder of a community garden that promotes the natural process of pollination.

Nikita From the Ukraine

Responsible for turning his school's food waste into useable compost for his home city.

Shalise From Australia

Protects the ocean by cleaning up human pollution from the shore.

Jordan From the USA

Spokesperson for the responsible use of palm oil products to reduce the destruction of rainforests.

The children at Hengde School, China

Built a water ecological learning field to learn about water conservation and ecology.

Himanji, India, campaigner for reducing the effects of traffic pollution

“Our time is passing on. The beauty of our planet is disappearing. Some elders have done their work – now it’s our turn...”

Felix Finkbeiner, Germany, passionate reforestation activist

“Just talking does not stop the glaciers from melting. Stop talking. Start planting!”

Amy and Ella Meek, creators of Kids Against Plastic

“It doesn’t matter how small your action is or how little time you have – it all helps!”

Hunter James Mitchell, South Africa, campaigner for the protection of rhinos

“We can be the generation of hope - but we need to speak out now and we need to make changes now.”

Eunita, Kenya, founder of garden that promotes the natural process of pollination

“Without pollination many wild plants would disappear and the landscape would look dull and gloomy. We need to conserve our pollinators.”

Nikita, Ukraine, campaigner for reducing food waste

“Unlike adults, we don’t think that solving problems is too hard. If you see a problem and think you can solve it – just try. It could change the world.”

Shalise, Australia, ocean clean-up advocate

“My dream is that one day plastic will become extinct and not at the expense of our beautiful marine animals.”